

What is Claimed is:

1. A computer security protection comprising an ATM/ALERT system which interacts with established software to recognize a valid identification which will then allow a
5 requested action to occur via the established software and an alert signal issued by the user who is under duress which will then activate security measures via the established software.
2. The computer security protection of claim 1
10 wherein identification comprises a PIN number, iris scan, thumb print or facial scan.
3. The computer security protection of claim 1 wherein the requested action requires first-time entry of a valid identification and second-time entry of a valid
15 identification.